

There are currently two main pieces of legislation dealing with arbitration in Pakistan: The Arbitration Act, 1940<sup>1</sup> and the Recognition and Enforcement (Arbitration Agreements and Foreign Arbitral Awards) Act, 2011<sup>2</sup>. Although the Arbitration Act, 1940 (a pre-partition enactment, which still continues in force) is a very old act begging for modernity and alignment with other fast paced international jurisdictions, it still serves as a clear and well settled piece of legislation with consistent chain of judicial precedents backing the interpretational aspects shouldering the changing times particularly in trade and commercial matters. The Act provides for arbitration with the intervention of the court and arbitration without the intervention of the court. The main difference between these two types of arbitration pertains to whether or not both parties to a dispute are willing to resort to arbitration. Arbitration without the intervention of the court takes place where both parties are willing to resort to arbitration without seeking the court to appoint arbitrator(s). Arbitration with the intervention of the court occurs where one party is willing and the other is not so as to enable the willing party to ensure adherence to the pre-agreed arbitration by the unwilling party. The Foreign Awards Act is simply a ratification of the New York Convention, 1958 providing that foreign judgments and awards by or between the nationals of contracting states are to be enforced without questioning the validity of the same except on the grounds explicitly provided for in the Convention.

The Statute

The law of arbitration in Pakistan is contained in the Arbitration Act, 1940. Its main features are summarized as under:

The Act provides for three classes of arbitration: –

- (a) arbitration without court intervention (Chapter II, sections 3-19);
- (b) arbitration where no suit is pending, (but through court) (Chapter III, section 20) and
- (c) arbitration in suits (through court) (Chapter IV, sections 21-25).

The Act also contains further provisions, common to all the three types of arbitration (Chapter V, sections 26-38).

Arbitration Agreement

Whatever be the class of arbitrations there must be an arbitration agreement. As defined in the Arbitration Act, 1940, it means a written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration, whether an arbitrator is named therein or not [section 2 (2)].

Arbitrators

The number of arbitrators can be one, two, three or even more. In the case of an even number of arbitrators, an umpire is to be appointed according to the procedure given in the Act (First Schedule). Where the arbitration agreement does not specify the number, the arbitration shall be by a sole arbitrator (First Schedule).

An arbitrator may be named in the arbitration agreement or may be left to be appointed by a designated authority (First Schedule).

Where the arbitration agreement is silent about the mode of appointment of arbitrators and the parties cannot agree about the choice of the arbitrator, the Act gives power to the court to make the appointment, after following the prescribed procedure (sections 8-10).

An arbitrator who does not diligently conduct the proceedings, or who is guilty of misconduct, can be removed by the court after due inquiry (section 11).

Death of a party does not terminate the arbitration proceedings, if the cause of action survives (section 6).

The arbitrator has got certain statutory powers, including the power to administer oaths to witnesses, power to “state a case” for the opinion of the court etc.

Court Intervention

If a party to an arbitration agreement refuses to go to arbitration, the other party can seek intervention of the court to compel a reference to arbitration (section 20).

Waiving rights under Arbitration clauses

An arbitration agreement may cease to apply if the parties agree on its termination. It may also be terminated as any other agreement, i.e. in accordance with general contract law principles. It may therefore be terminated or made ineffective simply by the conduct of the parties (impliedly or tacitly), partly or wholly. The parties may agree that the arbitration agreement shall not apply to a certain dispute or that it shall cease to apply entirely. A common example is that a plaintiff and a defendant (by not objecting) tacitly agree to submit a dispute to an ordinary court of law although an arbitration clause in a contract between the parties provides for arbitration. In such a case, the arbitration agreement is made ineffective in respect of the dispute at hand by the conduct of the parties.

Furthermore, and which is the subject matter of this article, pursuant to the general principles of law, a party may also unilaterally lose its right to rely on an arbitration agreement by waiving it, while the other party retains its right pursuant to the arbitration agreement. Having lost this right, a party may be in a difficult position if it intends to take legal action against the counterparty.

In general, if a party to an arbitration agreement commences proceedings in the courts in respect of a matter to which an arbitration agreement is applicable, this is likely to be treated as a breach of the arbitration agreement which will constitute a waiver of the right to arbitrate. Up until the point at which the defendant responds to the issue of proceedings it appears that the waiver is revocable. The potential breach of the agreement by the claimant would be repudiatory. A repudiatory breach requires the defendant to elect to accept the repudiation, and thereby discharge the agreement, or to affirm the agreement and require it to be observed. In the absence of any other correspondence, until the defendant responds to the court proceedings, it will neither yet have accepted the repudiation, thereby discharging the agreement to arbitrate, nor affirmed the agreement to arbitrate.

Therefore, in the absence of a response in the court proceedings from the defendant (or other relevant correspondence), the plaintiff, who had commenced court proceedings, could commence an arbitration. However, once the defendant has responded to the court proceedings, the plaintiff's waiver of its right to arbitrate will become either:

- (a) irrevocably waived, if the defendant takes a step in the proceedings to answer the substantive claim, thereby accepting the repudiation and waiving its own right to arbitrate by discharging the arbitration agreement; or
- (b) redundant, if the defendant makes a successful application under section 9 of the Arbitration Act 1996 to seek a stay of proceedings and have the matter referred to arbitration.

Policy

The foundations of Section 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 can be seen in Article 8 UNCITRAL Model Law<sup>3</sup> and Article II New York Convention 1954<sup>4</sup>. Both of these operate to create an obligation upon a court in which proceedings have been commenced by a party, in breach of an arbitration agreement, to refer the parties to arbitration, if so requested by the other party, unless the court finds that the agreement is "null and void, inoperative or incapable of being performed" (Article 8 UNCITRAL Model Law and Article II New York Convention 1954). Section 9(4) of the Arbitration Act 1996 picks up this wording and imposes a mandatory stay on proceedings unless the court is satisfied that "the arbitration agreement is null and void, inoperative, or incapable of being performed". It is therefore clear that the English courts, in line with the Model Law and New York Convention 1954, give great importance to what has been agreed between the parties and will do their utmost to give effect to an agreement to arbitrate.

However, the obligation under the Arbitration Act to order a mandatory stay arises only if the party who has not commenced court proceedings (i.e. the defendant in the court proceedings) wishes the matter to be referred to arbitration. The defendant is free to allow the court proceedings to continue in disregard of the arbitration agreement.

Waiving Right to Arbitrate

The existence of an agreement to arbitrate will not prevent either party from commencing judicial proceedings in court. However, the issue of proceedings in court by one party will usually amount to a waiver of that party's right to have the same dispute determined by arbitration if the defendant is content to have proceedings in court. This is also supported by section 34 of the Arbitration Act which provides that: "a party to an arbitration agreement against whom legal proceedings are brought (by way of claim or counterclaim) in respect of a matter, which under the agreement is to be referred to arbitration, may... apply to the court in which the proceedings have been brought to stay the proceedings so far as they concern that matter". However, a party's right to seek a stay is lost if that party takes a step in the proceedings to answer the substantive claim. To constitute 'a step in the proceedings depriving a party of its right to arbitrate, the action of this party must be one which impliedly confirms the correctness of the proceedings and the willingness of the [party] to go along with a determination by the Courts of law instead of arbitration. Therefore, conduct which illustrates an intention to abandon the right to arbitration will be construed as taking a step in the proceedings, for example, filing a defense.

Legal Effect of Waiver

When a party waives its right to have a dispute determined by arbitration by initiating proceedings it waives this right in respect of all matters that can be properly brought before the court in relation to that particular dispute. Where the plaintiff commenced proceedings in court in breach of an arbitration agreement, and the defendant subsequently filed a written statement thereby waiving his right. Subsequently, the claimant received permission to amend the particulars of claim so as to include issues which were closely related to the action. The defendant contended that these additional issues should be referred to arbitration and applied for a stay of court proceedings in respect of these issues. The issue was whether the amendments to the particulars of claim formed part of dispute of which the court was already seized, or whether they were discrete matters in respect of which section 34 of the Arbitration Act entitled the defendant to apply for a stay of the proceedings, in respect of those issues, and insist that they be arbitrated. The Court held that the additional issues were in respect of the matter raised by the original proceedings in relation to which the defendant had already waived his right to apply for a stay of proceedings under section 34 by taking a number of steps in the proceedings.

Is the Waiver Irrevocable?

The waiver will only be irrevocable if the defendant in the court proceedings accepts the plaintiffs' repudiatory breach of the agreement to arbitrate by taking steps in the proceedings. The Lahore High Court considered an application by a plaintiff to stay its own suit, and the defendant's application, in favour of arbitration. The agreement between the parties contained a clause submitting all disputes to arbitration. When a dispute arose, the claimant sought an interim injunction compelling compliance with the agreement. The application was made in a part claim form rather than making an application for interim measures in support of arbitration. The application was refused. Some months later, the plaintiff served a notice of arbitration. The defendant responded by serving its defense and counterclaim in the court proceedings and challenging in correspondence the plaintiff's right to pursue arbitration. The plaintiff applied to stay its claim and the defendant's counterclaim. The court granted a stay of the counterclaim, and a stay of the suit. Although it was "highly arguable" that the issue of the part claim amounted to a breach of the arbitration agreement, the defendant had not done anything which would amount to an acceptance of that breach, so as to bring the arbitration agreement to an end. However, had the plaintiff's issue of the claim form been accepted by the defendant, this would have amounted to an acceptance of the plaintiff's repudiatory breach, and the plaintiff would therefore have lost the right to resort to arbitration. The Court held that assertions made by the defendant in correspondence prior to the commencement of court proceedings, that there was no contract between the parties, amounted to a repudiation of the agreement to arbitrate. Consequently, the plaintiff's subsequent commencement of proceedings amounted to an acceptance of this repudiatory breach thereby terminating the agreement to arbitrate. Therefore, it can be seen that law focuses less on the concept of waiver as such (and whether it could ever be revocable). Rather, law uses ordinary contract law principles to identify repudiation (repudiatory breach) of the agreement to arbitrate. Only if the repudiation is accepted will the parties both be discharged from further performance of the agreement to arbitrate. Acceptance of a repudiation is by that means irrevocable in its consequence. It can be undone only by both parties agreeing again to arbitrate.

Procedure

The Arbitration Act, 1940, is totally inadequate, in regard to matters of procedure. Of course the arbitrator must observe the essentials of natural justice, failing which, the arbitrator's award can be set aside for misconduct (section 30). But various stages of the process are not dealt with in the Act.

In practice, arbitration is conducted on the basis of (i) the pleadings (statement of claim and statement of defense), whereupon (ii) issues may be framed (if necessary), followed by (iii) affidavits, (iv) oral evidence, and (v) arguments.

The Award

The award must be pronounced within the time limits laid down in the arbitration agreement or (failing such agreement), within 4 months of the commencement of hearing. However, the time limit can be extended by the court in certain circumstances (section 28, and First Schedule).

The award has to be in writing and signed by the arbitrator. If there are more than one arbitrator, the majority view prevails. The Act itself does not provide that the arbitrator shall give reasons for the award. When the award is a non-speaking award, the scope for interference by the court with the award becomes somewhat limited.

Court control over the Award

An award cannot be enforced, by itself. Judgment of the court has to be obtained in terms of the award (section 17).

In the scheme of the Arbitration Act, 1940, the court may: –

- (a) pass judgment in terms of the award (section 17), or
- (b) modify or correct the award (section 15), or
- (c) remit the award (on any matter referred to arbitration), for re-consideration by the arbitrator or umpire (section 16), or
- (d) set aside the award (section 30).

In short, the court may (i) totally accept the award, or (ii) totally reject it, or (iii) adopt the intermediate course of modifying it or remitting it.

Modifying the Award

Modification of award by court

The Court may, by order, modify or correct an award:–

arbitration and can be separated from the other and does not affect the decision on the matter referred, or

- (b) where the award is imperfect in form, or contains an obvious error which can be amended without affecting such decision, or
- (c) where an award contains a clerical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission (section 15).

Remitting the Award

The court may remit the award (or any matter referred to arbitration):

- (a) here the award has left undetermined certain matters or where it determines matters which are not referred to arbitration, and which cannot be separated from the rest or
- (b) where the award is so indefinite, as to be incapable of execution or
- (c) where an objection to the legality of the award is apparent on the face of it (section 16).

Setting aside the Award

The court can set aside the award, only on one or more of the following grounds, namely:—

- (a) that the arbitrator or umpire has misconducted himself or the proceedings;
- (b) that the award has been made after issue, by the court, of an order superseding the arbitration; or
- (c) that an award has been improperly procured or is otherwise invalid (section 30).

Misconduct of the Arbitrator (Setting aside the Award)

One of the principal grounds for setting aside the award under the Act of 1940 is the ground of misconduct. Section 30 of the Act expresses it in rather cryptic terms by phrasing it in this manner "the arbitrator has misconducted himself or the proceedings". No exhaustive definition of "misconduct" in this context can be given because misconduct is as large as life itself.

Because of the endless variety of situations in life, treatment of the subject in an exhaustive manner is likely to degenerate into a mere catalogue of instances. It will be more useful if selected instances of misconduct are collected and are classified under a few convenient groups. In arranging the cases under such group, one should bear in mind the fact that misconduct may arise from the arbitrator's conduct of the case, the arbitrator's relations with the parties, the arbitrator's mode of arriving at the decision (in regard to the materials relied on by the arbitrator or the tests applied), and the arbitrator's mode of formulating his award.

Specific Heads of Misconduct

Here are some specific heads of misconduct which recur frequently in practice:—

- proceeding ex parte, without justification (and analogous acts);
- private inquiries by the arbitrator; absence of the arbitrator;
- delegation by the arbitrator, or the arbitrator associating strangers with the arbitration; use of wrong criteria by the arbitrator;
- use of wrong material (by the arbitrator); irregularities in the award;

Proceeding ex parte and analogous acts are misconduct for an arbitrator:

- to hear only one party in the absence of the other; or
- to fail to give notice of hearing; or
- to amend the issues behind the back of the parties, thereby causing prejudice.

But it is not misconduct on his part to amend the issue at the time of writing an award, if no prejudice is caused to the parties.

Competent Court

The court competent to exercise various powers under the Arbitration Act, 1940, is the civil court, which would be competent to entertain a civil suit, if a suit were to be filed on the cause of action which forms the basis of the arbitration.

Private Inquiries

An arbitrator must decide on the evidence on record, and not on material obtained otherwise. It is misconduct on his part: –

- to import his personal knowledge into the decision;
- to hold a private conference with a party;
- to hold a private meeting behind the back of the party; to make a private inquiry behind the back of the party;
- to listen to confidential information, adverse to a party, even if the arbitration agreement gives him full latitude, (though the position may be different, if the parties had the opportunity of checking and contradicting the information so proposed to be utilized);
- to communicate with one party, behind the back of the other party.

Absence of Arbitrators

Where there are more than one arbitrator, they must all act together. The award is bad, if one arbitrator is absent. The position may be different if what was done during the absence of one arbitrator is done all over again by all the arbitrators, or if the act performed in the absence of one arbitrator is only ministerial, such as looking into an account book.

Joint Deliberations

All arbitrators must deliberate jointly. However, the parties may waive the irregularity. Delegation by arbitrator, or associating strangers with the arbitration. An arbitrator cannot delegate his functions to another person. It follows, that if the award is given by a person to whom the arbitrator delegates his functions, the award is a nullity. There is, however, an exception to this rule, where the delegation is: –

- (i) with the consent of all the parties, or
- (ii) a purely ministerial act.

An arbitrator cannot associate a third person with the decision-making process. Here again, there is no misconduct, if there was consent of all the parties, to such a course being adopted.

Use of Wrong Criterion by Arbitrator

Sometimes, an arbitrator, while not guilty of procedural lapses (as in the above categories of misconduct), employs a wrong criterion for coming to a conclusion. The award may then be set aside on that ground. Examples are:

- (i) assessment of damages for breach of contract, on the basis of rates prevailing in the black market (instead of the controlled rates);
- (ii) ignoring very material documents, at a stage when the evidence has not yet been closed.

Errors of Law

Questions of difficulty arise, when the arbitrator's decision is challenged, for an erroneous conclusion reached by the arbitrator on matters of law. The position appears to be a bit complex and cannot be stated with absolute certainty. However, broadly speaking, one can state the law on the subject in the form of the following propositions: –

- (a) where a question of law has been specifically referred to the arbitrator for his decision, then his ruling on that question, if bona fide and if not suffering from any other defect, is not open to challenge, merely because it is erroneous;
- (b) if a question of law has not been specifically referred to the arbitrator, his ruling on the point of law (if material to the result) may render the award void.

First as to situation (a) above. Where an arbitrator is called upon to decide the effect of the agreement, he has to really to decide a question of law, (i.e., in interpreting the agreement), and hence his decision on the point is not open to challenge.

error of law on the face of the award. However, for this purpose, the court cannot look into a document not referred to, in the award.

Generally, the question of error of law can arise only if reasons are given in the award. However, if the very relief granted by the award is illegal, the position is different. Thus, an arbitrator cannot grant specific performance of a contract of service. Nor can a contract for the sale of movable property be enforced specifically, save in exceptional cases.

Decision to be According to Legal Rights

An arbitrator must decide according to legal rights, and not according to his own notions of fairness. There may, of course, be special situations where a different intention of the parties may be inferred and upheld judicially.

Basis of Interference by Court

The logical basis on which the jurisdiction of the court to interfere for apparent error can be justified, needs first to be explained. The general principle is that an arbitrator is a final judge both of fact and of law. So far as questions of fact are concerned, this jurisdiction has been limited to decisions pronounced after serious procedural lapses, which reveal breach of natural justice or other technical misconduct. So far as errors of law are concerned, the jurisdiction of the court, (though not conferred in so many words by section 30), seems to have been based on the assumption that if the parties have not specifically referred a question for the decision of the arbitrator, then it is implied that the general power of the court to determine legal questions between the parties remains unimpaired. In theory, the jurisdiction can also be supported on the ground that the ultimate arbiters of questions of law should be the courts, so that uniformity is maintained.

Reasoned and Unreasoned Awards

Where the award is an unreasoned one, the court cannot interfere on the ground of an error therein. If the arbitrator chooses to give reasons, then the award can be set aside on the ground of error of law, although, in general, the reasonableness of the reasons themselves cannot be challenged.

Interpretation of Contracts

The same principle is also followed, regarding questions of interpretation of contract as determined in the award. Court can interfere only if the award is a speaking award. It is only if the line of interpretation is set out in the award that the court can interfere.

Breach of Natural Justice

Of course, the arbitrator would be guilty of misconduct, if there is a breach of natural justice. Thus, it is well established that the arbitrator cannot depend on personal knowledge or arrive at a conclusion behind the back of the parties.

But where the arbitrator decides a question of fact on the basis of the evidence and on the basis of answers given by the parties in response to queries from the arbitrator, the award cannot be said to be based on personal knowledge and cannot be set aside on that ground. Arbitrator's award may be set aside, if it awards charges for extra work, escalation charges and damages claimed by the construction contractor without any supporting material.

The preceding Arbitration Act of 1940 that governs domestic arbitration in Pakistan has several deficiencies. Under the Act, the parties are relatively free to adopt procedures of their choice with little oversight. With no national arbitral institutions, there are no arbitral rules, except for some formulated by courts within the framework of the Act.

There are flaws in Arbitration Act 1940, namely: No interim power in the arbitrator, too many grounds for judicial intervention at all stages (pre-arbitral, during arbitration & post award), as a result it defeats the whole object of speedy and cost effective dispute resolution. A new Arbitration Act should be passed to implement the UNCITRAL Model constitute a further step forward in the efforts of the Government of Pakistan to build a framework for investor-friendly Dispute Resolution.

Pakistan Enacted a Statute to Implement the ICSID Convention

The Islamic Republic of Pakistan is not foreign to defending investment claims. In order to restore investors' confidence in its country, the Pakistani government enacted on April 28, 2011 a law to secure foreign investment. The International Investment Disputes Act (the "Act") had been qualified by the Pakistani president, Mr. Asif Ali Zardari, as "a giant leap forward" to create confidence amongst foreign investors.

The Act is Pakistan's answer to the Supreme Court of Pakistan's 2002 decision in the SGS v. Pakistan proceedings that the ICSID Convention, although ratified by Pakistan, having not been incorporated into the laws of Pakistan by implementing legislation, the domestic courts had no power to enforce the provisions of the Convention while ignoring the existing national statutes relating to arbitration. This case saw parallel arbitration proceedings in Pakistan and before ICSID, and the Supreme Court upheld the lower courts' decision not to stay the arbitration proceedings under the Pakistani Arbitration Act following the commencement of the ICSID arbitration.

However, the SGS v. Pakistan case had highlighted the need for national legislation in order to give full force and effect to the ICSID Convention. The enactment of this legislation, however, was not exempt of obstacles. The legislation was first promulgated by presidential ordinance in November 2006, but lapsed. Under the Constitution of Pakistan, presidential ordinances have a limited life of four months unless earlier repealed or enacted into a statute. A new presidential ordinance was promulgated in March 2007 followed by another in July 2007, but the state of emergency was thereafter declared in Pakistan, which gave it permanent life. The permanent life however was cut short by a judgment of the Supreme Court which declared the emergency as illegal. This resulted in promulgation of another presidential ordinance in November 2009 followed by another in April 2010. The current Act is the result of a government sponsored bill introduced in Parliament in 2010.

The purpose of the Act is to implement the International Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes between States and Nationals of other States, with an aim to bringing transparency in the settlement of investment disputes. The Act attaches the ICSID Convention as a schedule.

Under the ICSID Convention, awards are insulated from review by national courts at the recognition and enforcement stage, but no such guarantees are offered when specific assets are targeted in execution of the award. Article 54(1) of the ICSID Convention provides that each contracting state shall "recognize an award rendered pursuant to this Convention as binding and enforce the pecuniary obligations imposed by that award within its territories as if it were a final judgment of a court in that State". Article 54(3) of the ICSID Convention provides that the execution of the award is governed by the laws concerning the execution of judgments in force in the State in whose territories such execution is sought, and Article 55 emphasizes that "nothing in Article 54 shall be construed as derogating from the law in force in any Contracting State relating to immunity of that State or of any State from execution".

The Act leaves a great discretion to the Pakistan courts for the enforcement of ICSID awards. Article 4 provides that an award registered in Pakistan must "be of the same force and effect for the purposes of execution as if it had been a judgment of the High Court" and, if the award "relates to pecuniary obligations", "proceedings may be taken on the award" and "the High Court shall have the same control over the execution of the award, as if the award had been a judgment of the High Court". High Courts in Pakistan are generally courts of appeal, which are to be found in each province. The purpose of giving jurisdiction to a High Court is to ensure the quality of judicial expertise. With respect to its binding effect on the government itself, the Act provides that the principles set forth in Article 4 bind the government but "not so as to make an award enforceable against the Government in a manner in which a judgment would not be enforceable against the Government". Moreover, the Act provides that these principles do not apply

In effect, therefore, the Act does not provide for a foolproof execution of ICSID awards in Pakistan. Execution of awards is subject to the review of the High Court and, if the award has been rendered against the Government, it can only be enforced if it were enforceable in the same circumstances if it were a judgment. In practice, the High Court will have the power to attach and sell assets, as long as such assets are not related to defense and national security. High Court decisions can be appealed. However, in execution matters, the grounds of appeal are very limited.

The Act, however, removes a lacuna and one can hope that it will render the enforcement of ICSID awards in Pakistan easier. It has also the advantage of providing an effective reference for the execution of awards in Pakistan. In contrast, in many a state, the execution of ICSID awards is left to the civil procedure provisions applicable to the execution of judgments, which can lead to confusion and unsatisfactory decisions.

In addition to this Act, Pakistan is also preparing the enactment of two statutes relating to international arbitration. First, a law to enforce the New York Convention has been passed by the National Assembly and is currently pending consideration before the Senate. Second, a new Arbitration Act, based on the UNCITRAL Model Law, is pending before the National Assembly.

A New Legislation Proposed

The Punjab Arbitration Bill, 2017 (the Bill), attached herewith should be introduced into the Punjab Provincial Assembly. The preceding Arbitration Act of 1940 that governs domestic arbitration in Pakistan has several deficiencies. Under the Act, the parties are relatively free to adopt procedures of their choice with little oversight. With no national arbitral institutions, there are no arbitral rules, except for some formulated by courts within the framework of the Act.

In its preamble the Bill aspires to implement the UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration (the Model Law) into Pakistan. The Bill, once promulgated into law, will constitute a further step forward in the efforts of the Government of Pakistan/Punjab to build a framework for investor-friendly Dispute Resolution.

The Bill is intended to supersede and build on the Recognition and Enforcement (Arbitration Agreements and Foreign Arbitral Awards) Ordinance, 2007 (REAO) which implemented the United Nation's Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards 1958 (NY Convention) into Pakistani law<sup>5</sup>. It is a holistic piece of legislation that covers the use of arbitration, conciliation and alternative dispute resolution within and outside Pakistan, including re-promulgating a domestic law implementing the International Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID) between States and Nationals of Other States (the Washington Convention)<sup>6</sup>. The Bill also proposed to establish an Arbitration and Conciliation Centre in Pakistan.

<sup>5</sup> Task Force on National rules of procedure for recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards pursuant to the New York Convention of 1958 which was Co-chaired by Geoffroy Lyonnet (France) and David P. Roney (Canada), In view of the 50th anniversary of the New York Convention in 2008, the Commission on Arbitration has created this task force.

The objectives of the task force are:

- to identify the countries to be covered by the work of the task force;
- to determine, for each country so identified, the national rules of procedure for recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards, with reference to articles III and IV of the New York Convention;
- to compile all such national rules of procedure for recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards on a country-by-country basis in one user-friendly document;
- to draft an introduction to and a summary of such compilation.

The Task Force is composed of over 150 registered members from 70 different countries.
